GOVERNOR'S ADDRESS

part in their beliefs as to make any vital difference to the country at large which may carry any particular election, provided that only the best men of either party are nominated; for the best men, be they either republicans or democrats, are interested in improving the condition of the masses, and in the welfare of the nation as a whole.

I am somewhat of an optimist, and I believe that owing to the printing press, the schools, and the general diffusion of knowledge, that mankind as a whole are gradually growing better morally and have higher aspirations and desires. A public sentiment has been aroused which tends to betterment of civilization, not only in our own republic, but through the entire civilized world. What was considered proper and legitimate only a few short years ago, is today regarded as wrong and would send whoever might be guilty of it to the penitentiary, if proved. I do not think that it can be disputed, or that it is open to argument but that the world is growing better with each generation, and in my opinion it is bound to continue to improve.

We have today no cities as bad as were Sodoma and Gomorrah, which were so steeped in wickedness and vice that they were wiped off of the face of the earth. Nor will their like ever be seen again, for the people of today would not stand for it. They have too much intelligence and are too well informed. The common orinary run of us poor mortals love honesty and purity of character. A truly good man is as much thought of today as he ever has been. "Above the shifting dust of Man's philosophy, above the crumbling creeds of human greed, a good life radiates forever."

And now, young gentlemen of the graduating class of the New Mexico Military Institute, I desire to say that such of you as feel that you are adapted to it will, I hope, go to higher institutions of learning and pursue further the paths of knowledge which you have but just entered upon here. To you all I say, be honest, truthful, and persistent in whatever path you may follow. Honesty, truthfulness, constancy of purpose and determination to succeed, will inevitably give each of you some measure of success, and will make you respected in the community in which you may chance to live, and to have and deserve the respect of your acquaintances, friends and fellow townsmen, is as much as any one ought to expect or care for.

The future opens to you many channels of work and employment, and it depends upon yourselves as to whether or not you will seize the opportunities which are presented to every man, or whether you will blindly close your eyes and allow them to elude you.

Some of you may become soldiers, lawyers, businessmen, manufacturers, tillers of the soil, or follow the arts of literary pursuits. Whatever you do, put your entire will and energy into it. Use the brains with which God has endowed you, and try to do things a little bit better than others have done them. This, with honesty and truthfulness, is the way to succeed. If you only put a part of your energies into your life's work if you only go at it in a dilutant sort of way success will not be your reward; nor should it be. Whatever is worth doing is worth doing well. If you cannot do it well, if you do not care enough for the work you have chosen to put your whole energy into it, then select some other calling which you like better, no matter what it may be. It has been well said that "the law is a jealous mistress," and other occupations are jealous likewise, i. e. to succeed you must go at it with a vim, you must put your whole heart, soul and strength into your work.

From what I have seen of you young men, since I have been here, I believe that you appreciate this; and that most of you will succeed in whatever you undertake in after life.

I am glad that I had this opportunity of coming to Roswell. I am glad to have seen your valley and that I have met so many of your good, honest, sturdy men and beautiful women.

I am glad to have seen this school and to have met your teachers, and above all, I am glad to have met this graduating class. Young gentlemen, I wish you God Speed and every success in life that your own efforts and a benign Providence can give you.
